FORMERLY NDG FOOD DEPOT

“

Having a sense of belonging helps have roots in the community and breaks the isolation. When you are going through a tough time there is someone there. I live a much richer life emotionally because of the bonds that I've made. [The Depot] breaks the stigma of poverty by allowing people of different backgrounds to come together and respect each other.

A DEPOT PARTICIPANT

A MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

There is never a dull year at the Depot and 2017 was certainly no exception.

Not only did we move into two fantastic spaces in the heart of NDG, but we continued to innovate and improve the scope, impact and reach of our programs, culminating in the Depot being recognized as the first community food centre in Quebec by Community Food Centres Canada.

This recognition is yet another step in our continuous effort to question the status quo and be a positive force for our community. And we've seen the strides we've taken bear fruit:

Our new programming space on Somerled Avenue is welcoming and dignified and has further destigmatized our emergency food services. We're attracting more families than ever and most participants report having made friends through the Depot. Plus, our new commercial kitchen has greatly improved our cooking workshops and meal preparation.

Our Healthy Food Policy has allowed us to offer a standardized and nutritious emergency food basket composed of fresh ingredients and whole foods, and we've maintained these rigorous nutrition values across all our programs even as demand has grown. Most participants indicate that the Depot's programs have helped improve their overall diets in more ways than an increase in fruits and vegetables.

Our after-school cooking and nutrition activity, Boîte à Lunch, was recognized by the Maple Leaf Centre for Action on Food Security for its unique approach and excellence, and will be expanding into four other low-income neighbourhoods in Montreal. In this and all the Depot's programs, the majority of participants indicate they've learned new skills and new ways to prepare foods.

Our Ca pousse! social business nearly doubled its sales and ploughs ahead with ground-breaking garden projects - from transforming an abandoned lot on Laurier into a community garden and event space, to developing a green education certification program linked to science and math curricula in schools. Our gardens continue to be a source of physical and mental well-being for participants. In fact, 50% of people across all Depot programs report an improvement in their mental health.

Our rigorous impact evaluation process has been cited and used as an example by Centraide for other Montreal organizations to learn from and we have been diligent in using evaluation results to improve our programs and better meet the needs of our community.

And the list goes on...

This annual report highlights our approach and impacts on two key vulnerable populations in our community - youth and seniors - but in truth, there are many other groups who are equally at risk.

The effects of poverty, food insecurity and social isolation are far-reaching and severe, and impact our entire society. The Depot has seen tremendous growth in the past few years, and we could not have done it without your support, but our work is not done. We must forge ahead together to improve the health and well-being of our entire community and ensure everyone has a place at the table.

Thank you for your continued support in this effort.

A MESSAGE FROM THE BOARD CHAIR

From our humble beginnings as a project of the NDG Community Council, to the thriving organization we are today, the NDG Food Depot is constantly innovating.

As early as our first few years in operation, we aimed to do more than give out food baskets. Programs such as the Depot Café and Cinema Depot helped strengthen the social fabric of NDG and build community by fostering social connections between our participants.

Innovation is about bringing new and creative strategies to stubborn problems. Last year, our major challenge was to find a building that could adequately house the myriad of services and programs we now offer. Since a single space could not be identified, we opted to spread our organization across two buildings. It was not easy, but the new spaces have allowed us to greatly improve many of our key programs and our capacity to serve participants, and to accommodate our expanding team.

Innovation can also be disruptive, and redefine the context in which one operates or even create entirely new categories. A community food centre is a perfect example in that it's taken the prevailing approach to food insecurity, which did not consider food quality and nutrition or reduce social isolation, and turned it on its head. Community Food Centres Canada, created in 2012 to replicate the proven Community Food Centre model across Canada, has forged ahead with impressive results. Their approach is to create a welcoming place that brings people together to grow, cook, share and advocate for good food for all. There are currently eight such organizations spanning the country, with another four to be announced this year. In 2015, the NDG Food Depot joined forces with Action Communiterre and Boite à Lunch, giving us all the makings to be adopted under this innovative banner.

It is with great pride and excitement that today we celebrate our recognition as the Depot Community Food Centre, the first of such centres in Quebec!

To truly capture its impact, innovation needs to be measurable. That is why we have introduced a number of evaluation tools, including the Annual Program Survey, which allows us to hear directly from program participants, about what's working and what we can improve. We take this feedback seriously and do our best to adapt and adjust.

As we continue our search for a permanent home, we are certain that we will need to keep thinking creatively. With innovation as an integral part of our organization's DNA, I am confident that we will find solutions that will allow us to continue to positively impact the health of our community. We are eternally grateful to our supporters, our funders, our partners and all those who make the Depot the special place that it is.

None of our progress would have been possible without all of you, and we are pleased to invite you to continue this journey with us.

THE DEPOT IS NOW A COMMUNITY FOOD CENTRE

WHAT IS A COMMUNITY FOOD CENTRE?

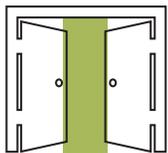

A Community Food Centre (CFC) is a welcoming space where people come together to grow, cook, share and advocate for good food. CFCs provide people with emergency access to high-quality food in a dignified setting that doesn't compromise their self-worth. People learn cooking and gardening skills, and kids get their hands dirty in the garden and kitchen in ways that expand their tastebuds and help them make healthier food choices. Community members find their voices on the issues that matter to them, and people find friends and support. CFCs offer multifaceted, integrated and responsive programming in a shared space where food builds health, hope, skills and community.
